Of the Objection to the System of Materialist derived from the Consideration of the Divine Essence. TT will be said, that if the principle of r* thought ist man may be a property of a material substance, the divine Being himself may be material also; whereas, it is now almost trrtivepsally believed to be the doctrine of revelation, that the Deity is, in the strictest fense of the word, an immaterial sub/lance, incapable of local presence; though it will be stiewn in its proper place, that the sacred writers fay nothing about such a substance. Considering how much this subject is above all human comprehension, it is no wonder that she most opposite opinions should have been maintained with respect to it. But this consideration, at the fame time that it ought to check our boldness, ought, likewise, to have taught us mutual candour and indulgence. I am fully aware how difficult it is to express myself with clearness on a subject so extremely obscure, and how hazardous-it is to advance the very little that any man can fay concerning it. But I shall not, on this account, decline speaking freely and fully to every difficulty that either has been urged against against the system of the materiality of man, or that has occured to myself with respect to it; and the objections which arise from the consideration of the divine essence, are of such particular consequence, that I shall treat...
